Time to party after 30 years of city support

Erdington Constituency

HELP celebrate 30 years of learning and jobs support for city residents as ENTA marks its landmark birthday with a Celebration Open Day at its local centre in Kingstanding later this month.

ENTA is a not-for-profit organisation that works across Birmingham to provide learning opportunities, training, information and guidance to help people think about and prepare for paid employment. It has bases in the city centre and on Kingstanding's Wyrley Birch Estate.

A fun and information-packed Celebration Open Day for the whole community will feature children's entertainment, craft activities, stalls, refreshments and music alongside information about family support and childcare, jobs and training opportunities, and careers advice for all ages. A highlight will be Rhyme Time finger puppet stories at 11am and 2pm thanks to Kingstanding Library.

Gary Scott, who has been with the organisation since it started life as Intaskill in 1978, said: "We would love to hear what past trainees and staff are doing now and what impact ENTA had on their lives."
